Well whathing a football game and it has lot of people at it. It was very lound there that night. Well the field was green and there storm come in foem the south west. They people started to leave because of the storm. So they cancel the game intill the storm over. They had the game on next day and the home won.

Organization/Purpose: Score 1+

- The setting is created, but the description is brief and the narrative stance is not well- developed. It is a third-person narrative with events but no plot that moves the reader smoothly from one event to another.
- There are no effective transitional strategies to move the reader from one event to the next in the sequence.
- The opening doesn't establish the situation clearly.

Evidence/Elaboration: Score 1+

- Narrative techniques to move the reader from point to point in the event are virtually absent. The use "so" to move the reader from the storm to the cancellation of the game is the only technique used.
- Characters and the sequence of events are vague and confusing.
- No concrete imagery is used to describe the setting, the storm, or the people involved.

Conventions: Score 0

- Errors in sentence construction: the opening sentence is a fragment.
- Unclear pronouns ("they," in particular)
- Numerous spelling errors in a five-sentence piece
