Using this Manual

This manual is intended to clearly and concisely describe the minimum requirements districts must use as entry and exit procedures; however, there are many opportunities for the workgroup to share its wealth of knowledge related to supporting ELs and developing academic language. These ideas can certainly improve an ELs experience at school as well as enhance the curriculum, instruction and assessment practices of districts who implement them with fidelity. Throughout the document, you will see the following symbols noting specific ideas from the group.

Guidelines for Identifying English Learners

Every school district in Missouri must have procedures in place to identify students who meet the federal definition of an English learner. As stated in Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972, an English learner is an individual who is

A) age 3-21
B) who is enrolled or preparing to enroll in an elementary or secondary school
C) (i) who was not born in the United States or whose native language is a language other than English; (ii)(I) who is a Native American or Alaska Native, or a native resident of the outlying areas; and (II) who comes from an environment where a language other than English has had a significant impact on the individual’s level of English language proficiency; (iii) who is migratory, whose native language is a language other than English, and who comes from an environment where a language other than English is dominant
D) whose difficulties in speaking, reading, writing or understanding the English language may be sufficient to deny the individual – (i) the ability to meet the state’s proficient level of achievement on the State assessments …; (ii) the ability to successfully achieve in classrooms where the language of instruction is English; or (iii) the opportunity to participate fully in society.

1. Identify potential ELS during enrollment using the Language Use Survey (LUS)
2. Screen any students whose LUS notes a language other than English is spoken or understood by the student.
3. Determine whether the student meets the eligibility criteria
4. Notify parents or guardians of assessment results and placement decisions within 30 days of enrollment
5. Code students correctly in MOSIS
Enrollment

During the enrollment process, districts must ask the parents or guardians to respond to the following questions:

- What was the student’s first language?
- Which language(s) does the student use (speak) at home and with others?
- Which language(s) does the student hear at home and understand?

If the answer to any of these questions notes a language other than English is either spoken or understood, the student is potentially an English learner and the district must take active steps to determine if the student qualifies for language instruction educational program (LIEP). Ideally, the enrollment packet includes a Language Use Survey (LUS). Districts are encouraged to use the LUS in Appendix A that includes three tiers of questions meant to understand more about the student’s linguistic and educational background.

Be aware that language assistance services must be advertised in a visible location and provided upon request.

Initial Screening

Every potential EL identified by the LUS is required to be screened within the first 30 calendar days after enrollment. For second semester 1st graders through students in 12th grade, all districts in Missouri must use WIDA’s Online Screener administered by a trained district employee. 1st semester Kindergarten students will only take the speaking and listening sections of the Kindergarten Screener and must take the ACCESS for ELLs in the spring. 2nd semester kindergarteners and first semester first graders must take all four domains of the paper-based Kindergarten Screener.

There are exceptions to these guidelines, but they should be applied in very specific cases.

Exceptions: During the 2018-19 school year, newcomers – defined as students who have been in the country 4 months or less and demonstrate compelling evidence they have no English proficiency, may take the Newcomer Kit found on the DESE EL Assessment webpage. Additionally, 1st semester Kindergarteners who score a combined 29-30 on the listening and speaking sections, may take the reading and writing portion of the Kindergarten Screener at any time in the first semester if the test administrator feels the student can be successful. By giving all four domains, district leaders may confirm a student’s eligibility for the district’s LIEP and potentially not be required to administer the ACCESS for ELLs in the spring.

The screener will produce a series of scores by domain and an overall English language proficiency (ELP) score. The Kindergarten Screener for kindergarten and first semester first graders will produce a combined score for speaking & listening and individual scores for both reading and writing. Please see the chart below for specific scores that determine eligibility for ELD services.

Students with disabilities must take as much of the test as they can. For example, a student with a hearing impairment will not be able to take the oral sections of the assessment. They can, however, take the literacy portion. Decision-makers must carefully consider performance on these domains when deciding on eligibility. More information about accessibility can be found on the WIDA website.

If the student is eligible, the students must be placed in the district’s LIEP and the parents or guardians must be notified in a language they can understand. There are occasions where parents may opt-out or refuse the services provided by the district. Although parents are entitled to do so, districts must still take necessary steps to overcome language barriers that potentially prevent students from achieving proficiency on content assessments or participating in a classroom where English is the language of instruction. One of many possible steps is coaching the student’s teacher(s) in sheltered instruction strategies. Further details are beyond the scope of this document and can be found in Section 2 of the Educating Linguistically Diverse Handbook.

Parents or guardians must be notified in a language they can understand once the district has determined a student is eligible for the LIEP. Please see Appendix B for DESE’s recommended notification forms. How the parent notification is delivered is the decision of individual districts, but a copy of the notification should be kept in the student’s permanent file.

The final step is to accurately code the students in the Missouri Student Information System (MOSIS). Please see the chart below for the codes and descriptions needed to identify ELs.

Parent interviews are a great way to welcome ELs and their parents to the school. Delivering parent notifications in person makes a positive impact and can dissuade parents from refusing the district’s LIEP. District staff can learn more about the student’s background and can share important information about school events, routines and rules. If the district has the capacity to overcome any language barriers, these interviews do wonders for EL parent involvement.

The following are some scenarios that districts may encounter during the enrollment process that frequently cause confusion or misidentifications.

- Student A comes from a household of 2nd generation immigrants. For a few months each year, the student’s relative comes to live in the house, but she is dominant in Spanish. During enrollment, the parents note a language other than English is spoken in the home accounting for when the relative visits. The student, however, does not speak or understand the language.

- Student B is a native English speaking student living with a single, native English speaking parent. Recently, the parent’s boyfriend/girlfriend moved in whose first language is one other than English. During enrollment, the parent noted a language other than English is spoken in the home. The student may be learning some words in that language, but does not truly speak or understand it.

Neither student should take the WIDA Screener. If you refer back to the federal definition of an English learner, you will notice that the language spoken in the home must have a “significant impact” on the individual’s level of English proficiency. Certainly students are influenced by the languages spoken around them including in the womb, but an EL is a student whose exposure to a second language has significantly impacted his or her English proficiency.
Gathering and Evaluating Evidence for Reclassification

ESSA has progressed beyond traditional methods of reclassifying students by no longer permitting the option to use content assessments as part of the reclassification criteria. In other words, results from the Missouri Assessment Program (MAP) Grade-Level Assessments and the End-of-Course (EOC) Assessments cannot be used. Without content assessments, districts are encouraged to find alternative evidence that proves an EL can fully participate in classrooms where English is the language of instruction. This provision includes all content classes and electives. To meet such a challenge, we advocate for districts to collect additional evidence, commonly referred to as a portfolio, to complement the student’s ACCESS score when making reclassification decisions.

Portfolios

Various national organizations focusing on educational and psychological testing insist that high-stake decisions should not rest solely on a single test score and that other evidence is needed (AERA/APA/NCME, 2014). The Council of Chief State School Officers (CCSSO) guidance seconds that notion as well as explicitly notes that local educators who are closest to the EL students should meaningfully participate in this decision (Molle, Linquanti, MacDonald & Cook, 2016). Additional evidence should support inferences about an EL’s English language proficiency as used in general education classrooms and should directly confirm or dispute individual domain scores earned on the ACCESS. The following diagram illustrates how evidence collected in the district’s portfolio complements the ACCESS for ELLs assessments.

The goal of the portfolio is simple: to ensure districts are exiting students according to the “Goldilocks Principle” - just the right time, in just the right manner. If a district exits a student too early, they are at risk of academic failure; however, prolonging a student’s time in an EL support program potentially limits educational opportunities and demoralizes students (Linquanti 2001; Callahan, 2009; Robinson, 2011). Since exited students should be able to demonstrate full academic potential in content area classrooms without additional English language support services, the workgroup strongly suggests that multiple measures be taken from various content areas to comprehensively verify any reclassification decision.

Districts should consider starting the data collection process early in the school year for students with an overall ACCESS score of 3.5 or higher, especially for students earning that score on the screener. Those responsible for the student’s education should collect evidence from existing formative assessments, projects, formal reports or writing assignments. In the final quarter, evidence can easily selected from the portfolio to serve as a summary of the student’s abilities and used to support what the student earns on the ACCESS for ELLs when the performance reports are given to districts.

The process outlined in figure 2.2 reverses the previous steps that districts typically made for reclassification in that the additional criteria is assembled prior to receiving the ACCESS for ELLs score reports. To ensure that adequate data is collected, those gathering the evidence should consider data points representing each language domain in the case one is low on the ACCESS. Please see Appendix C for a sample portfolio checklist.
Prior to receiving the score reports, districts should evaluate the portfolio to identify students who may potentially be reclassified. This final preparatory step anticipates both false positives and false negatives on the ACCESS. False positives are those students who score high on the ACCESS, but should remain in the program. False negatives are students who score low on the ACCESS, but have demonstrated the potential to achieve on grade level assessments and participate fully in class and society (see Federal EL definition). Please see Appendix B for a portfolio rubric.
Guidelines for Reclassification

ESSA includes a statutory provision that requires states “to include uniform criteria that are applied statewide” (USED, Federal Register, 34586) and must not include the performance on content assessments. “Relying on content assessments may result in students being included in the English learner subgroup beyond the point when they are actually English learners, which may lead to negative academic outcomes for an individual student…” (USED, Federal Register, 34587). These statutes conflict with previous reclassification criteria used by many Missouri districts and require all states to respond by using alternative measures that provide evidence that language is no longer a barrier to achievement on state content assessments and the student is performing on par with native English speakers in a class where English is the language of instruction.

After receiving the ACCESS for ELLs reports, district staff should carefully review the performance of any student considered for reclassification. Students will no longer meet the definition of an English learner and consequently be reclassified from ELD services when they demonstrate proficiency on the annual English language proficiency assessment and are able to succeed in age/grade appropriate learning environments. As noted in figure 3.1, Missouri’s defined score for English proficiency is a minimum 4.7 on the ACCESS for ELLs. In the case the district feels a student’s score was a false positive, or too high, additional evidence must be in the student’s portfolio that directly contradicts a specific domain score on the ACCESS. For example, the student earned a score in the 5 range for each domain, but the district has gathered evidence that the student is reading below grade level or is not able to write authentic, content-area reports at an acceptable level. The district is able to prove the student still needs language support.

To account for false negatives, students who score low but by all other measures is not an EL, may be exited provided the district has collected a body of evidence that directly disputes low domain scores. As shown in Figure 3.1, students whose overall scores are lower than 4.7 may be reclassified with satisfactory evidence. Since this data may be difficult to collect after the score reports are received, districts are Districts should carefully consider reclassifying students in grades K-2 as well as any transition between buildings (ie. elementary to middle school). Young learners are still acquiring their first language and there is a documented “slump” many ELLs make in 3rd or 4th grade as they change from learning-to-read to reading-to-learn. Transitions between buildings have produced similar results.

encouraged to develop a portfolio, either traditional or digital, for students throughout the school year.

The next step districts may choose to take is an agreement between stakeholders at the school and the parents or guardians. This agreement is a component that remains from Missouri’s previous exit criteria, but one that is more of a formality than criteria. ESSA specifically notes that exit criteria be objective; opinions cannot be included. See Appendix D for a sample reclassification agreement form. This step is a great way to increase communication and collaboration between the school and home.

The final step to reclassification is coding in MOSIS. ESSA allows for states to include former ELs in the accountability system for 4 years; however, only two years are required for monitoring. The additional MOSIS codes AY3 and AY4 are added for the 2017-18 school year and beyond to identify former ELs who have successfully completed the two-year monitoring period. Please see the chart below for the codes needed for reclassification.

The concept of masking refers to scenarios when a student’s limited English proficiency “masks,” or prevents school personnel from identifying other areas in need of attention or development. The following are common scenarios that can be “masked” by a student’s limited English proficiency.

- Student A has been in the LIEP for 5 years and has earned two consecutive scores in the 5 range on the ACCESS for ELs. However, the student continues to underperform in class. This student is potentially in need of a specific intervention other than ELD.
- Student B consistently performs at the top of his class, shows remarkable leadership skills, creative thinking, and visual or performing arts skills. In other words, he shows the signs of a gifted and talented student, but is in an LIEP and consequently not identified.
- Student C is a long-term EL who consistently scores high on the ACCESS for ELs, but has excessive absences, poor class grades and consequently, an inadequate portfolio. This student continues in the LIEP because of poor content performance and most likely will not produce the evidence necessary to successfully complete the eventual monitoring period.

In each of these scenarios, the local district has the option to use professional judgement to provide the most appropriate support or interventions. District personnel may determine that a student may be exited from the LIEP when objective data supports the decision that English proficiency is no longer a barrier to performing in a class where English is the language of instruction.
Guidelines for Monitoring

ESSA continues the requirement of the two-year monitoring period. To better understand reclassification, consider it as a “conditional exit” from the LIEP. They are exited from the program with the condition that they continue to perform on par with their English-speaking peers. Monitored students follow all of the same rules and procedures as all other students. They do not receive accommodations, modifications or alternative assessments. They do not receive direct support from the ELD specialist and they do not take the ACCESS for ELLs. If a monitored student begins to struggle or if concerns arise that English language proficiency is a barrier to achievement, that student can be placed back into the LIEP and continue as if (s)he never left the program. This includes taking the yearly ACCESS for ELLs.

Documentation is required to prove these students were indeed monitored to ensure each student is performing on par with the average non-EL in the classroom. Evidence should reflect how each monitored student performs on typical assignments, projects and/or assessments and be taken from what all students. See Appendix E for the monitoring form. This form and evidence should be included in the student’s permanent file. After successful completion of the two years of monitoring, there are no further actions with regards to data collection.

After two years of monitoring, students are still a part of the EL subgroup for an additional two years. Although there will be special coding (see above), there is no further actions to be taken by teaching staff for former ELs.
Frequently Asked Questions

1) The parents did not indicate a language other than English is spoken in the home, but we suspect there is. What are our legal rights and obligations?
   School districts are required under federal law to identify all English Learners in the district. The LUS is a tool that is used in the process of identifying students. A parent withholding information on the LUS, or providing inaccurate information, does not alleviate the district from its responsibility to identify ELs. If there is a reason to believe the student may not be proficient in English, the students must be assessed.

2) What happened to the Home Language Survey?
   As we edited our HLS questions, the focus changed from languages used in the home to languages used and understood by the student. Consequently, we changed the name of our survey.

3) Can students who have completed the monitoring period be pulled back into the program?
   Any student can be pulled back into the program if objective, valid and reliable data shows that language is a barrier to achievement. If the student did complete the monitoring period and evidence shows the student should be in a LIEP, a program evaluation would be a good next step. Districts are cautioned to consider other possibilities to ensure language is not masking the real issue.

4) For one reason or another, we suspect a student was misidentified as an English Learner. What steps must we take to release the student from the LIEP?
   We suggest documenting what happened in writing and place it in the students file. Change the student’s MOSIS code to NLP.

5) For kindergarten students who passed the W-APT with a 29 or 30, and who earned a passing score on the ACCESS for ELLs, what further responsibilities do districts have?
   None, the student was never fully identified as an English learner.

6) If a student enrolls during the ACCESS testing window, which test do they take?
   They take the screener as any other new student. You have the option to give the ACCESS, but are not required to do so.

7) What role do content assessments (MAP, EOC, etc.) play when making reclassification decisions?
   Content assessments can validate reclassification decisions, but cannot be used as the sole reason to keep a student in the LIEP.

Dear ________________
Congratulations! After a thorough review of your child’s academic performance and test scores this past school year, your child will exit the district’s language instruction educational program. A primary factor for this determination was your child’s performance on the yearly language assessment called the ACCESS for ELLs. A copy of the parent report of this assessment is included with this letter.

In Missouri, a student who has an overall score of 4.7 or higher is considered proficient and not eligible for a language instruction educational program. Some students may still exit the program with a score lower than a 4.7 if additional evidence disproves a lower than expected score in speaking, listening, reading or writing.

We will continue to monitor your child for two years to ensure he or she continues to be successful in all classes. If at any time we suspect that your child is struggling and in need of our support, we will bring him or her back into the program.

As always, if you have any questions or concerns, please contact the school.

¡Felicidades! Después de una revisión detallada del desempeño académico de su hijo(a) y las calificaciones de los exámenes este último año escolar, su hijo(a) saldrá del programa educativo de instrucción de idiomas del distrito. Un factor primario para esta determinación ha sido el desempeño de hijo(a) en la evaluación anual del idioma llamado ACCESS para ELLs. Una copia del informe de los padres de esta evaluación se incluye con esta carta.

En Missouri, un estudiante que tiene una calificación general de 4.7 o superior se considera competente y no es elegible para el programa educativo de instrucción de idiomas. Algunos estudiantes todavía pueden salir del programa con un puntaje menor que un 4.7 si la evidencia adicional demuestra una puntuación más baja de lo esperado en hablar, escuchar, leer o escribir.

Continuaremos con la supervisión de su hijo(a) durante dos años para asegurar que él o ella continúe teniendo éxito en todas las clases. Si en algún momento sospechamos que su hijo está teniendo problemas y necesita nuestro apoyo, será readmitido al programa.
